GERMANY EXPRESSES INDIGNATION OVER NATIONS' ATTITUDE

Reich Lodges Protest With Great Britain and Also Italy

OVER THE RESOLUTION

Swift Action Taken After Criticism of Germany's Re-Armament

LONDON, England, Apr. 18.—Germany expressed "indignation" over the attitude of Great Britain and Italy at Stresa and Geneva in a protest handed in at Berlin. It was learned authoritatively here today, when Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon returned from Geneva. Sir John gave immediate consideration to the protest forwarded here by the British Ambassador at Berlin.

BERLIN, Germany, Apr. 18.—Acting swiftly in the light of the League of Nations' strong resolution criticizing Germany's re-armament, the Reich today lodged a protest with Great Britain and Italy over their attitude at Stresa and Geneva. State Secretary Von Bülow of the Foreign Office delivered the protest to Sir Erik Phipps, British Ambassador, and to the Italian Envoy, calling their attention to the responsibilities of their respective nations as guarantors of the Locarno Treaty. In effect, Germany was understood to have asked whether they would feel obliged to take action against France in case of aggression, as well as against Germany.

While Reich leader Adolf Hitler debated his next move, the Union of National German Jews today urged him to remain adamant in the face of the League of Nations censure of Germany's re-armament via the treaty violation rule. The League of National German Jews sent a message addressed to Hitler at his house in Munich stating it "stands unshaken in its loyalty to the Fatherland and hopes the government defense policy will not be changed on account of the Geneva proceedings."

ROME, Italy, Apr. 18.—A policy of "peace through strength" was proclaimed by Premier Mussolini today in greeting 2000 former French soldiers gathered at the Piazza Venezia. "Only strong nations," he said, "have a viable constitution of peace which is to be able to defend it against the snares in its path."

It Duce was most cordial in his greeting, addressing the ex-soldiers as "comrades." He emphasized the great place given in the Fascist State to veterans of the World War.

DRAMATIC CLUB APPEALS TO HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

Organization Was Formed Here Two Years Ago And Met With Success

MEMBERSHIP IS TWENTY

Formed two years ago The Bristol High School Dramatic Club appeals to students at that institution of learning in an unusual way. The appeal is great, but there is only one means by which the young men and young women of the senior high school may enter, and that is by way of the annual play. Students who "make" the cast for this auspicious occasion automatically become members of The Dramatic Club.

The formation of the Dramatic Club came about when members of the cast of the Christmas play in 1932 and of the school play cast "Girl Shy" decided they would like to have a permanent organization. The students who had participated in these two were the ones affiliated with the dramatic group, and the new members are secured through casts of the annual play. Any student in Sophomore class or above is permitted in the "try-outs."

At present the membership is 20, with Miss Margaret Collier serving as president; Samuel Sirott, vice president; Miss Eleanor Dyer, secretary; Johnson Orr, treasurer. Election occurs each Spring for the following school term.

The Dramatic Club of Bristol high has a trio of teachers interested in its welfare through advisory capacities, and the entire faculty backs the group in many ways. Miss Gladys Hewitt is the club advisor and coach, being assisted by Miss Florine Wilkes. The technical advisor is David Hertzler.

The club meetings occur every second Monday at the hour of 3:30 p. m., in Miss Hewitt's class-room. At present plans are being made for a public initiation to occur in the high school auditorium on Wednesday, April 24th.

The club members used funds from the treasury to purchase some stage sets of furniture last Fall, and are adding to their funds now in the hope additional sets will thus be available. Money is secured through stage performances and dues.

The activities of the club this year have been varied. Last Fall the stage presentation, the annual school play, was "Happy Landings." Later the club members presented a one-act comedy as a radio broadcast feature from Station WTNJ, Trenton, N. J. The young folks are engaged at present in writing an act in corroboration with the Bucks County Historical Pageant. The several acts, written by various dramatic groups in the county, will be joined, the several episodes later being available for presentation as single episodes or as an entire pageant to schools in the county for staging.

The pageant will be prepared in pamphlet form, and will be available at the office of the county superintendent. The students of Bucks County have been enlisted in this project by assistant superintendent of Bucks County Schools, Charles Boehm, Morrisville.

Usually two main plays are staged during each term by the Bristol high dramatists, but the Spring play is to be omitted this year owing to other activities. The members of the club who are seniors are busy writing the class night performance. This unified performance will include the usual features, but in a playlet form.

The evening sessions staged for two nights last year at the high school, depicting for the public the manner in which the classes operate, were written in their entirety by the Dramatic Club. And frequently are such calls ably answered by this group.

At graduation time on behalf of the club members, pins are presented to the graduates who for two years have been members of the club. These "Dramatic Club" pins are cherished possessions of the "grads," recalling many happy hours spent in the study and presentation of plays.

WOMEN'S GROUPS ARE RELUCTANT TO AID

None Offer to Back Girls'
Activities for Youth
Week Here

PLAN FOR ATHLETICS

Difficulty is being experienced in plans for girls' activities for Youth Week here. To date no women's organizations have been willing to sponsor the project, and the officers who are directing the general affairs of the week find themselves much handicapped as far as the girls of the town are concerned.

Miss Margaret Pope has consented to care for the athletic events for the girls, but as for activities for the "little women," it looks as if they might be left "out in the cold" unless some women's organizations take an interest immediately.

In an effort to have the girls represented in affairs of that week, April 25th to 4th, Miss Pope, and William Dougherty, athletic coach for boys at Bristol high school, called a special meeting of the Girl Reserves, Bristol High school, yesterday afternoon.

From this group, representatives from each ward were delegated to call upon women in their respective wards last evening, in an endeavor to secure adults to aid in girls' athletic work. The results will be learned today.

Miss Pope states that athletic contests for girls will be the same as last year, these to include: Class A—high and broad jumps, 75-yard and 100-yard dashes, baseball and basketball throws, and quarter-mile relay; Class B—broad jump, 50-yard and 75-yard dashes, relays, baseball and basketball throws.

The girls are late in starting practice work, but with Easter vacation starting today, and warmer weather promised, they are expected to make up for lateness.

The three were ready to drive here when the accident occurred. Mrs. Yrigoyen is still in the hospital, and Mrs. Coulthard has returned home.

CO. SEAT IN QUANDARY OVER LOCK-UP SITE

Opposition to Erection of Municipal Building In Central Section

IS UNDER ADVISEMENT

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 18.—Doylestown Borough is still at a loss to find a suitable place for a station house or lock-up.

At a session of Borough Council there was considerable opposition to the erection of a municipal building in the central section of the town to contain cell rooms.

For years the town has kept its overnight prisoners at the Bucks County Prison but this can no longer be done without paying "board" for them. One plan advanced was to build a bunk house to cost about $500, but this was turned down. Another plan is to build a building to house the Council clerk, tax collector, bunk rooms and a meeting place for Council, to cost $2600, but this did not meet with unanimous approval.

The proposition was held under advisement until a later date.

SPEAKER CONTENTS THAT DEMOCRACY HAS NOT FAILED

Prof. Walton H. Mohr, George
School, Addresses
Fathers' Ass'n

ENJOY MINSTREL SHOW

Group from Mothers' Ass'n
Present Ausing Program
At Meeting

The meeting of the Fathers' Association of the Bristol Public Schools, held last evening in the high school auditorium, was marked by two features, each of which proved to be very interesting.

First on the program was an inspiring talk by Professor Walton H. Mohr, of the Department of Social Science of George School, on the subject, "Education of the Common Man."

Stressing the need of enlightened common sense on the part of the average man in a democratic form of government such as ours, Professor Mohr pointed out how the rise of strong nationalistic governments during the last decade, such as that of Germany under Hitler, has led many people to say that democracy has failed. "Yet," he said, "these people overlook the fact that for several thousands of years mankind has tried all sorts of dictatorship forms of government and each has invariably ended in ruin. Democracy, on the other hand, has been in actual use for only a little more than 100 years. Is it not too early, therefore, to judge and condemn democracy as a failure?"

Answering his own question, Professor Mohr then showed in greater detail how the success and progress of a democratic government eventually depends upon the enlightened common sense of the average man and woman of the community.

"While the schools can and do help in the education of that common sense, it is extremely important that the average man educate himself by everything at his disposal, so that he will be not merely an automaton, but a thinking individual, capable of analyzing a situation and of exercising good judgment in regard to it. That judgment of the average man can be depended upon to be right in the long run in matters of government, even though it may be somewhat slow in forming. Once formed, it is the bulwark of our government's inherent strength."

Turning from the serious to the strictly entertaining, the next feature on the program was a minstrel show given by a group of women from the Mothers' Association, composed by and produced under the direction of Mrs. George Herman. Song and dance numbers were interspersed with various and sundry stories, many of which proved rather enlightening, while the gay costumes added real color to the scene. The interlocutor was Mrs. "Ted" Downing; "endmen" were Miss Garnette Herman, Mrs. Howard Mitchell, Mrs. Anthony Saranzak, and Miss Elizabeth McBrien; while the circle consisted of Mrs. David Neal, Mrs. Roy Ott, Mrs. Harry Hinman, Miss Ethel Keers, Mrs. Earl McEuen and Mrs. Jessie Richardson. Mrs. Oscar Herman was the accompanist at the piano. The show was well received and thoroughly enjoyed.

In the course of the business meeting, Asa Fabian, chairman of the membership committee, announced that thus far 40 new members have been added to the membership list, while 52 former members have renewed their connection with the Association. Inasmuch as membership returns were not complete, the awarding of prizes was postponed. Contributions were ordered made to the Youth Week fund and to the Senior Year Book. Following the meeting, refreshments were served in the cafeteria.

BREAKING MILK BOTTLES

Milk bottles and lamps out of the street lights are being broken in large numbers and complaints are being made in all sections of Bristol.

Milk dealers lose many dollars each year due to the fact that milk bottles are mischievously broken by boys.

A resident of Beaver street the other morning reported five milk bottles were taken from her doorstep between eight and nine o'clock and broken.

The broken glass is a menace to motorists as the jagged glass is scattered about the highways.

This is a practice long existent in Bristol which should cease.

POLAND WANTS PEACE

Capt. Anthony Eden, swinging around the Eastern European circle, had an easy time in Russia, but Poland was more difficult. The Poles are not in favor of any scheme that would predetermine their siding with Russia in a conflict with Germany, or with Germany in a fight with Russia. They know too well that if they side with either, Poland will be the battleground of that war; for Poland is the meat in the sandwich.

With full realization of her situation, a poor country between two powerful nations, Poland has seen the advantage of making pacts of non-aggression with both. These pacts, at the moment, were to the liking of both Germany and Russia. They removed, for the time, the question of the Polish Corridor and Danzig, from the German calculations, and the threat of German-Polish aggression in the Ukraine from those of Russia. Whether Poland can rely on these treaties is beside the mark; under the circumstances, she must put faith in them, and therefore she does.

The French idea is to draw Poland once more within the circle of French alliances against Germany, which would virtually mean Poland and Russia against Germany on the eastern front—Poland between the scissors blades, as she was for much of the World War. The Poles did not enjoy that experience, and they do not want a recurrence of it.

They are, to be sure, still subject to the decisions of the League of Nations, whose duty it is to define the aggressor it was breaks out. But the League has proved itself so indefinite in action, so unwilling to attempt an exertion of strength for fear it would merely demonstrate its weakness, that the Poles reasonably believe they have little to fear on that score.

The slogan of all blocs is the quaint American phrase: "Gimme."

When you don't know what you are making you are taking a mistake.

Exercise alone should give you slender lines. Look at the tongue.

Another thing the Christian world needs rather badly is Christianity.

Romance: "He is rich and when we're married I won't have to work any more."

Tact is just the art of making the other fellow feel more important than yourself.

It is a long lane that has no yearning, judging from the number parked coupes on a spring evening.

FASHION PARADE

By Margaret Garrahan

L. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, April 18.—(INS)—Enter the gilet-petticoat—and we might add, exit a lot of individual bits and bobs . . . for this new gadget, just making its debut on one of the smarter Fifth avenue counters, combines everything one needs for the new suit or redingote. It's made like a backless slip with halter neck, and features both pleated gilet top and petticoat ruffle—all in polka dotted taffeta and designed to act as blouse under a suit, or swishy frock under a redingote coat . . .

And speaking of redingote coats, one of the ultra-ultra shops is featuring what they call "the redingote coat with the little boy collar"—a belted princess model to be worn only partially unbuttoned over prints. A similar idea—this a soft woolen coat with refer collar and full sleeves, teamed with contrasting print dress—is being pushed by another shop. The coat comes in navy, black, brown and red.

More and more the one important thing to include in one's wardrobe (you're practically lost without one) is a navy blue ensemble, no matter what the adverse ballyhoo—and the more you can do with it, the better. A suit, for instance, with a colorful monotone sports shirt of silk, or many crisp cotton ruffles at the throat, or a simple, but swanky, white silk blouse with a flower on the lapel. (Pique flowers are sweeping forward again, by the way.)

Any number of those slim little crepe cape dresses—all versions—also are being worn, these with long white or chambray gloves and featuring high necklines with a tiny white choker under the chin, or flowers or sprigs of cherries and such on the shoulder. Many light-top jacket dresses, too, with the jackets not too short and lace tops, very feminine and frilly, to the fore.

"CURE" WORKED!

BELGRADE—(INS)—Postman Geo.

"Wish I could do the same, but I've got some others of this gang downstairs to talk to." Darden gave orders for a policeman to remain on guard in the room throughout the night, even after the body had been removed. "The Inspector will be around in the morning," he said, "and maybe a lot of others. Nothing is to be touched."

Darden returned then to his in-room, chair in the dining-room, this time alone, for he did not invite Merriam's presence. He ordered St. Gregory Valcour sent in.

The artist from Two-Sixty-Eight Waverly Place seemed dazed and uncertain of himself.

"Where were you," began Sergeant Darn, curiously, "when this murder was committed?"

"Why, I must have been next door," replied Valcour, his small eyes shifting warily. "I had been there some time, selecting some paintings to show Mrs. Elderbank—inching them off and getting them to looking nice, you know."

"Did you get them?"

"Yes, sir, some of them. The best ones, though, were locked up in a friend's apartment and I had forgotten it. Those are the ones I brought over."

He indicated a stack of six or eight small paintings on the floor facing the wall. "Mrs. Elderbank told me to leave them here."

"What time did you go next door?"

"Why, I don't recall, exactly. A little after twelve, I think it was."

"In which part of the house do you live, next door?"

"Ground floor, that is, the—er basement."

"Front basement?"

"Yes, sir, I have the whole floor."

"While you were there did you see anyone leave this house and go into that one?"

"Yes, sir, I did. I saw Mr. Thurber."

"He went in that house, did he?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he go on up to his apartment?"

"I suppose he did, yes, sir. I didn't see him come out again. Of course I might not have been near the window then."

"Did you hear him stop on the floor above you and use the public telephone in the hall?"

"No, sir, I didn't hear him."

"Could you have heard him?"

Valcour was uneasy. "Why, I think so, yes, sir. The phone is right near the back stairs leading down to the basement."

"How long were you in the basement, picking out pictures?"

"Why, I couldn't say, sir, definitely. Perhaps fifteen or twenty minutes. I went upstairs to my friend's apartment—he was the one who had the paintings I mentioned."

"What friend?"

"Why, Mr. Coulter. He lives on the second floor next door. I had left them in his apartment so he could see them, and also any of his friends who might drop in. But his door was locked and he was here at the party, so I didn't bother him."

"Hm! At what time did you come back to this house with your paintings?"

"Why, it must have been between a o'clock and one and one o'clock, from what I have heard."

"From what you've heard? What do you mean?"

"I mean I heard somebody say it was about that time the colored maid found Mrs. Elderbank's body and I saw her come running down the steps, screaming, to the library floor, just as I went up after leaving these paintings in here. Of course, I had been in here perhaps ten minutes, arranging these pictures in the order I wanted Mrs. Elderbank to see them in—a lot of denials on first impressions, you know."

"So I've heard."

"THE COLD FINGER CURSE"

by EDWIN DIAL TORGERSON

SYNOPSIS

During a party at her home, wealthy Mrs. Violet Elderbank is murdered and her jewels stolen. Among the guests were June and Jimmy Kirkman, her neighbors, and their tenants, St. Gregory Valcour, pseudo artist; Glenn Thurber, a newspaper reporter; and dignified Douglas W. Coulter, a statistical expert. Marjorie Clarken, Thurber's fiancée, and Roger Duane, a specialty dancer, are also present. The crime occurred while the house was in darkness and drums were beating for Roger's Zulu dance. Violet had been summoned to a private telephone in her bedroom. Her maid, Elsie, found her chloroformed and gagged. About that time, Price Merriam, Violet's secretary and companion, who operated the lights for Thurber's dance, had difficulty in turning them on after having put them out for Roger's entrance. Thurber disappeared during the performance to make a telephone call next door. Valcour had gone there to get some of his paintings for Violet. Elsie the maid claims she was busy in the kitchen when the telephone rang, but both Merriam and Coulter, the butler, state she was not there. According to Coulter the call was from the telephone office stating it had a message from Montreal for Mrs. Elderbank. A check-up reveals there was no such call but that Glenn Thurber telephoned at 12-21. Thurber emphatically denies this. As he is about to let Darden into his room, Thurber discovers his key is missing.

CHAPTER XIV

"I remember now. I gave the extra key to Mrs. Kirkman downstairs. She has to have some way of letting the maid in to clean the apartment."

"Oh, yeah?" scoffed Darden. "You go on in there and get whatever you want to take to jail with you. I'm giving you a ride to headquarters."

He addressed one of the men in uniform. "Take this man, Thurber down. The charge is murder."

"But, say—" began Thurber.

"Save your breath," urged the Sergeant. "You'll need it. You've got a lot of talking to do in the next twenty-four hours."

"May I use my own telephone?"

"Yes, but make it snappy."

Darden turned to Captain Nobley as the dazed newspaper man unlocked his door and entered the apartment.

"What's the new lead you've found for me, Captain?" inquired Darden.

Nobley snapped off his flashlight and put his magnifying glass in his pocket.

"I think we'd better step back next door so I can show you just what I mean," said the expert.

"There are lots of queer prints over various things in the unfortunate lady's boudoir, some of them merely smudges. But there's one thing you can be absolutely certain of."

"What's that?"

"This man Glenn Thurber you sent up to me a while ago was in the lady's bedroom, all right. I found his finger-prints, plain as the nose on your face."

"Where?" queried Darden, visibly flustered.

"On the lady's telephone."

In the downstairs hallway of the late Mrs. Elderbank's home they met Price Merriam. He was nervous and excited.

"I've just had Montreal on the phone," he sputtered. "The old gentleman was terribly upset. He kept saying, 'I knew it would happen. I knew it would happen!' But he's gone to the core. He is coming down at once—leaving to night on a special train. And he's bringing a detective with him."

"A detective?" grunted Darden.

"Yes, a Captain Montgomery, of the Montreal detective bureau—at least he said he would bring Montgomery if he could get the Inspector's permission. He says the Montreal police know something about the case, as a matter of fact."

"Oh, all right," said Darden. "The more the merrier. I've heard of Montgomery. He's a good man. But I think before he gets here we'll have the men in jail who killed this woman."

"I hope so!" murmured Merriam fervently as Darden and Captain Nobley hurried up the stairs.

A policeman had been left on guard in Violet Elderbank's bedroom, where the body still lay awaiting removal.

Captain Nobley had severed the telephone cord, but the disconnected instrument stood undisturbed on its table.

"There are finger-prints all over it," declared Nobley, pointing out the spots where the marks had been developed. "Mrs. Elderbank's record is pretty clear in a number of places, but the clearest of all are on the black surface of this composition mouthpiece—that is where I found Thurber's."

"No mistake, is there?"

"No possibility of mistake. The rankest amateur could identify these. Take a look. We have photographs, of course, but I'll take the whole instrument along for an exhibit. We found the same finger-prints, plenty of them, on the ladder-steps leading to the roof next door."

"Thurber's there too, eh?"

"Absolutely."

"And the steps leading down from the roof garden of this house—Thurber's there, too?"

"Can't tell, there. Too many people used that stairway. People did their hands up and down the railing—nothing but smudges."

"Nothing on the roofs, I suppose?"

"Washed clean. The rain is too much for us. But there is no doubt in my mind that the person or persons who killed this woman got through the roof garden, and escaped the same way, going down through the adjoining house."

"It looks that way," muttered Darden, "and it looks like—"

"Thurber," supplied Captain Nobley. "Or if he didn't want us to think so he shouldn't have left his signature. He must have touched the telephone by accident—knocked it over in the struggle, maybe. He couldn't have been alone, though."

"Any other finger-prints?"

"No, none than can help us, nothing legible. But evidences of other persons, or at least one other person, who visited here besides Thurber. On the adhesive tape, for instance, are marks where fingers pressed it down. But they're not finger-prints—you can look all night and never find a whorl or convolution."

"Gloves, then," declared Darden, examining the marks through Captain Nobley's glass.

Nobley shrugged. "Maybe. But you can't prove it by me. I can't spot the texture of cloth gloves, and the marks don't look smooth as though they were made by leather ones. Gloves don't seem to chime in with your theory of prowling thugs."

"Neither does Thurber," replied the Sergeant quickly. "I didn't know about him when I told you that. He's keen—these newspaper birds usually are. He probably has covered police. He has heard it said at headquarters that chloroform and stolen clothing plot to negro thieves, so he throws in the chloroform and the missing glad rags to give us that kind of a picture."

"And his motive?"

"My godfather! Isn't a million dollars' worth of pearls and diamonds motive enough?"

"But he wouldn't have had to kill her."

"He didn't intend to—that's where he bungled. Either that, or he had talked because she recognized him. I believe we've got the man. But we've got to find his playmate."

"Well, well," said Captain Nobley cheerfully. "All that is out of my hailiwick. I've finished my little performance, and I'm going home to bed."

"Wish I could do the same, but I've got some others of this gang downstairs to talk to."

Darden gave orders for a policeman to remain on guard in the room throughout the night, even after the body had been removed. "The Inspector will be around in the morning," he said, "and maybe a lot of others. Nothing is to be touched."

Milady's GARDEN NOTEBOOK

PRESCRIBED FOR BABY'S DIET

Spinach, carrots and string beans are not only food for babies in these modern days, they are prescriptions. The infant, before it is a year old, must start on a vegetable diet, which in all likelihood would have thrown our great-grandmothers into fits.

The vegetable garden has become a necessity for children, particularly babies who must have their fresh spinach and other garden truck if they are to be raised in robust health and strength and there is no place that vegetables of the best quality for the youngsters can be secured except in the home garden. Spinach, carrots and string beans are a standard prescription because they have become practically all-the-year-around vegetables in the market and can always be had, except spinach, which gives way to beets or other greens equally as valuable in summer, only to return in the fall for an all-winter stay.

These three are the easiest of vegetables to raise and a tiny plot in the back yard will furnish an ample supply for the babies. The spinach will have first call, occupying most of the patch, with a row of carrots to one side. As the spinach is pulled and used more plantings of carrots can be put in and as soon as the weather is sufficiently warm a few hills of string beans can go in for baby's garden. A plot 5 feet square will go a long way towards providing the needed fresh vegetables for the infant and a 10-foot square will produce considerable for the rest of the family.

Carrots and spinach for the earliest crop, to be followed by beans and then more carrots, gives the summer's succession. A few tomato plants can be set along one edge of the plot and trained to stakes and single stems to furnish tomato juice for the infant diet late in summer.

There is room in any yard for a garden for the baby provided only it gets sunlight and the fresh-picked vegetables are far better than can be bought in the market.

WOMEN'S AID SOLICITED IN HOUSING PLAN

Field Representatives Are Named to Back Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A concerted, nation-wide movement is now gaining momentum to mobilize the women of the United States behind the Better Housing Program, with a corps of 50 women field representatives now engaged and actively explaining the operations of the National Housing Act to women in the 48 States, according to the Federal Housing Administration.

The campaign is being directed toward the women of the Nation because between 80 and 90 per cent. of all income, according to good authority, is expended by the women of the country. Moreover, as the wife is the home maker, the Federal Housing Administration is of the opinion that great impetus to modernization, repair, and new building will grow out of a more widespread knowledge among women of the details of the National Housing Act.

The organization of Women's Divisions to co-operate and function with local Better Housing Committees has been developed within the past two months. To herald what is expected to be an extensive development of enthusiasm among American women, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt added her voice to the movement Friday, April 5, in an address which was broadcast by radio to the women of the Nation. Groups of women were assembled in hundreds of communities on the occasion to hear Mrs. Roosevelt sound the "call to arms."

The District of Columbia women's organization is being organized and developed with the specific purpose of acting as a model for similar groups throughout the country.

The primary purpose of the women's organization will be to acquaint the 29,000,000 home makers of the United States with the advantages to be derived from modernization credit plan for repair and improvement and the insured mortgage plan for new building and the refunding of old mortgages.

The women field workers will work toward the end of creating a desire for modern homes; assist local Better Housing committees in the dissemination of information; deliver radio addresses; talk before groups of women and women's clubs; serve at information booths in stores, theaters, etc., and act as a definite unit in the Better Housing organization throughout the 48 States.

The Field Division of the Federal Housing Administration has inaugurated a plan which has been passed on to field workers. The work will include the following categories: 1. Speaking engagements. 2. Organization of an active women's division. 3. Radio programs.

Detailed instructions to field representatives covering this plan have been sent out by the Washington office to assist them in obtaining a maximum reaction from American women.

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable.

LARGEST BARN RAZED

KEARNEY, Neb.—(INS)—The world's largest barn, 300 feet long, 100 feet wide and 56 feet high, was ordered razed here when its owner found it unsafe for further use. It was built years ago to impress cattlemen with the feed value of alfalfa.

Short Cuts to the Dinner Table

Recipe From Famous Restaurant of Other Days Included Today

I have a delicious recipe for you today, and one that might be included on the Easter dinner program. It's a strawberry meringue cake, and comes to me from the kitchen of a once famous New York restaurant. This restaurant in days gone by catered to royalty upon the occasion of their visits, to debutantes, at their "coming out" parties, and to the socially elite of many cities, for to be wined, and dined at this smart thing. However, like all good things, its palmy days were destined to be numbered, and today, this restaurant, which once stood out so prominently, is but one of the many to be found in the great Metropolis. But I am, I think, most fortunate to possess a cook-book containing recipes which went toward the making of dishes "fit for kings" and I'm glad to share them with my many friends. So here is the Meringue Cake which I hope those of you who try will find to the queen's taste as well.

Strawberry Meringue Cake
1 lb. confectioners sugar
6 egg whites
small sweet strawberries
1/4 teaspoonful salt
3/4 teaspoonful of vanilla or 2 1/2 tablespoonfuls lemon juice.
Add salt to the cold egg whites and beat with a wire whip or rotary egg beater, beating slowly at first, but gradually increasing speed until whites are stiff. Sift the sugar slowly and carefully over the froth, mixing it in gradually. Add flavoring. Pour into three buttered layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes or until a delicate brown. Allow layers to cool, then cover with strawberries and place layers of meringue, one on top of the other. Serve with whipped cream.

And now, suppose we have a menu suggestion for our Easter dinner.

Easter Sunday Dinner
Jellied Printanier Soup
Garnished with lemon and parsley
Celery Curls Spring Onions
Virginia Style Baked Ham
Glazed Sweet Potatoes
Pineapple Fritters Spinach
Watercress with French Dressing
Strawberry Meringue Cake Coffee

And before I say adieu today, I wish to extend to all of you, my sincere wishes for a Peaceful and Happy Easter.

JEFFERSON SCHOOL WINS

Yesterday afternoon on the high school diamond, the Jefferson avenue school won its first game of the season from the high school Cards by the score of 6-5. "Erny" Pinnell hurled the ball for the winners throughout the game. "Dunks" Chicklette, "Hank" Russo, and "Fibbs" Pluney did the hard hitting for the winners. "Angie" Asta hurled for the losers and pitched good ball, but had support from his team-mates caused his downfall.

K. OF C. TO ORGANIZE TEAM

All baseball players who desire a try-out for the Knights of Columbus baseball team in the Bristol Twilight League are requested to be at Leedom's field, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

SELF-PROTECTION

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(INS)—Two bachelors—state senators W. C. Fidler and Jack Borschach—introduced an anti-heart balm bill in the Oklahoma legislature. It would abolish suits for about everything love-lorn gentlemen are wont to do under the spell of D. Cupid.

EWALD HENRY WINS ROUND ROBIN "TOURNEY"

Last night the round robin bowling tournament was completed with Ewald Henry emerging the winner, winning the final match from Brooks. Following were the scores rolled:

Yeagle	215	173	226	614
Jackson	145	184	201	530
Brooks	218	213	227	658
Colville	147	151	178	476
Cahall	176	179	176	531
Henry	193	203	183	579
Yeagle	171	145	233	549
Brooks	180	211	227	618
McDevitt	132	181	143	456
Henry	176	181	202	559
Brooks	168	193	180	541
Henry	211	182	159	552

Entries are being received for a two-man tournament to get under way as soon as possible. A chance for all bowlers to participate. Each team's combined averages not to be over 340. This gives a good bowler and a fair bowler a chance to get together and the games are usually close. It is hoped to get a good number of entries.

LOCALITES GET "TRIES" WITH VARIOUS CLUBS

By T. M. Juno

Several localites who have scintillated on the diamond for the past few years are receiving try-outs with various clubs in Philadelphia. It appears as if "Vic" Rockhill and "Gige" Dougherty are almost certain to land a berth with the Holmesburg nine.

"Bill" Fine, Bristol hurler, has again gone north to play in the Canadian-American League. "Bill" will hurl for the Sunbury team and also play the outfield. "Dea" Still, a member of last season's Hulmeville club has left with Fine and expects to have a try-out at shortstop with the Sunbury team.

According to Dave Landreth, "Dazzy" Vance, at the present time signed with Brooklyn, lost sixteen and three-quarters pounds one hot day while hurling against the Pittsburgh Pirates, quite a few years back. Vance claims that one-half of the poundage was lost worrying what Max Carey, then an outfielder for Pittsburgh, would do when he came to the plate.

Five teams are entered in the Lower Bucks County League, leaving an opening for a club. Cornwells made a wonderful showing in the circuit last season and it is a wonder that some one in that section did not enter the team in the loop. The Cornwells boys were such good sports, too.

"Johnny" Cole, former Bristol High School athlete, played in the football game between St. Joseph's College and Lehigh University last Saturday. Cole kicked the extra point after the touchdown twice for the St. Joe's team which lost the contest, 21-14.

Youth Week baseball will be the preliminary to the openings of the local twilight leagues. Last year, "Tommy" Muffett, hurling for the Second Ward, carried off the individual honors by pitching a no-run, no-hit game. Edgely carried the baseball honors, beating the Croydon team in the play-off.

The Bristol Twilight League opens its season on April 29. The Lower Bucks gets under way April 30, and the first game of the Delaware River League will be played on May 4.

The Delaware River League will be the fastest of the three as the teams in the vicinity of Trenton will have mostly Jersey players and according to their gate receipts can afford the expense of getting players of a little better grade than what the teams of this vicinity could gather.

If Dollington is as strong as it was last season, it is the team that will carry the pennant. However, a strong fight is expected from start to finish and it would not be surprising to see a team of this vicinity fighting among the top-notchers.

St. Ann's has finally been eliminated from the Paxon Tournament. The Excelsior Colored Club will be open this Friday but on the twenty-sixth will play the Zulu Jungle Giants. The setting for this game hasn't been arranged as yet.

"Herbie" Lawrence has been recently seen putting the Elks tennis court in shape. Another tournament in the order of the one last season is expected to be run on the court.

Final arrangements are being made for the Penn-Jersey Bocce League. There are three bocce courts in Bristol. St. Ann's have one in the rear of their club-room. The Bristol Democratic Club has theirs alongside of their club house on Radcliffe street and the Bristol Bocce Club uses the Sons of Italy alleys on Wood street.

SELF-PUNISHMENT

BUDAPEST.—(INS)—Whipping of schoolchildren is forbidden by Hungarian laws. So an ingenious Budapest female school-teacher introduced the system of self-punishment in her classes. Little boys of 6 and 8 were sentenced to give themselves five boxes on the ear for smaller offenses and 10 for greater ones. The self-punishment was executed publicly. The father of one of the children was informed of this strange system and the teacher is now being prosecuted by school authorities.
